

AUDITION FOR A CHARMING CLOWN

Lyrics: Pamela Keeley, K. Ronan © 2009

Music: Pamela Keeley, K. Ronan and Ronan Dooney©2009

Demo Sung By: Alex Sharpe

How much time should I put a side
Auditioning to be his bride
Unrequited love is tearing me apart
Does he see it in my eyes or does he even realise
He's breaking my fragile heart

I know I have to let him go
I need to do this so I'll grow
Into a woman, who knows herself worth
And I've grown tired of been treated like dirt

How long should I wait around
Addicted to this charming clown
He captivates my heart, commands my very soul
Always joking having fun, I secretly hope I'm the one
He warms me but I'm left cold

At parties I will stare and try, to accidentally catch his eye
And for a moment, a magical glance and call me over and ask me to dance

CHORUS:

But his eyes betray his wandering life, he'll never want me as his wife
He's far too independent, does he have a heart at all
It isn't love that he's looking for and that's the way it seems
Our relationship can't be the way I see it in my dreams
Where it's me, that he sees, when he looks in my direction
Yes it's me and just me, in his eyes it's my reflection
Oh it's me, only me, only me, alone

I know that this will never be
I know my mind plays tricks on me
I know he'll never think of me, the way I think of him
At parties I'll still stare and try to accidentally catch his eye
A glance, a sign, a dance, be mine.....